Competitiveness can be destructive or creative.

In this new book Edward Carter tackles a neglected theme in ethics, and explores ways in which the Christian tradition can help frame positive forms of competition. He shows how competitiveness is able to contribute to solidarity within society as well as strengthen a sense of identity in individuals.

About CEME

The Centre for Enterprise, Markets and Ethics (CEME) is a not-for-profit think tank based in Oxford dedicated to investigating the ethical and moral basis of the market economy.

CEME seeks to bridge the gap between economics, theology and business.

About CCLA

CCLA is one of the UK's largest charity fund managers. For over 60 years they have provided investment management services for charities, religious organisations and the public sector.
